

PRINCE CHARLIE'S CHAIR

IT, WITH OTHER OF HIS BELONG-

Some Old Bells to Which Peculiar Interest Is Now Attached—Relics of Burr's Bank—Captain Jack's Rifle in the Museum

Here is one of the oldest chairs in the world. It is a precious relic associated with the romantic career of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" of Scotland, and is now in Glasgow among a number of other heirlooms that have in some way been connected with the ill fated royal wanderer of Scotch fame.

Here is one of the oldest chairs in the world. It is a precious relic associated with the romantic career of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" of Scotland, and is now in Glasgow among a number of other heirlooms that have in some way been connected with the ill fated royal wanderer of Scotch fame.

The black oak table at which Bonnie Prince Charlie dined the day before the battle of Culloden was sold for $1,969 at the recent dispersal of the furniture and relics belonging to the Forbes family kept in Culloden castle. The table was bought by the Mackintosh, of Mackintosh, whose clan suffered severely in '45. An antique cabinet brought $2,000, and an armchair carved from the "rebel tree" on which the Highlanders hung their kiln pots the night before the battle, $550. The sale brought in $17,500. A Culloden medal that had been given to General Thomas Gage, adde-camp of the Duke of Cumberland in the fight, and later responsible for Lexington and Bunker Hill, was sold in London for $1,150.

PRINCE CHARLES' CHAIR.

CAPTAIN JACK'S RIFLE.

The Weapon With Which Canby Was Killed Now at National Museum.

One of the most interesting relics which has been presented to the National museum for a long time has just been received there. It is the rattle which Captain Jack the notorious Modoc Indian, used in his fight in the lava beds of Southern California, and it is thought to be the identical weapon with which General Canby was murdered while holding a parley with the chief under a flag of truce.

It was captured in the lava beds of Southern California.

Engraved on one side of the barrel is the name of the maker, John Shuler, of Liverpool, Pa.

RELIQS OF BURR'S BANK.

Some Wooden Blocks That Have an Unusual History—A Bank That Was Chartered as a Water Company.

The New York Tribune says a curious discovery was made a few days ago by some workmen engaged in laying the new tracks for the underground trolley of the Fourth Avenue Rapid Transit Company, at Grand Central, the men found at a depth of about three feet from the surface a number of blocks of wood, some of them measuring about an inch and a half in diameter had been bored. No one could understand how the blocks had got there, or the situation in which they were found, or for what purpose they had been used, until one of them was shown to the old New York City Jail.

He recognized it at once as a section of [illegible]

The Extremes.

From the Indianapolis Journal.

"I saw a returned Klondiker this afternoon."

"What was he doing—buying diamonds or begging the price of a supper?"

DEST LIVING SUBJECT

little cabin in the Driving park at Owen Sound, Canada.

Daddy Hall was born in the year 1783. He is a halfbreed Indian and negro—and in his youth lived with the Indians on Walpole island and the adjoining mainland. Although he most resembles the negro in features and color, he is a thorough Indian in his habits and was known by the Indians of his tribe as "Shee-ho-ho-hone" or

"It's Smoke."

About the year 1900, the Canada government was requiring an interpreter for the farm instruction of the Indians on the Crediton reservation. Accordingly he moved East with his squaw and remained at the Crediton frame school until the fall of 1912, when he returned engaged as a scout—doing good service under the American soldiers and taken prisoner to Fort Meigs, from which he was released after several months.

After the close of the war he made his home on the Crediton reservation, where, in front near the Humber river, where he farmed, fished and made Indian bark wood canoes.

On the breaking out of the Upper Canada rebellion he was compelled to act as a guide to MacKenzie and his band. He was captured by the British troops on the Crediton road, near Toronto, and conveyed to Montgomery's tavern, on Yonge street. These are the important incidents of his long career as a scout and captive. These are the reasons why he has been called "Smoke," by a bayonet which left him lame in one leg, yet despite this he has always led a most industrious life. He has now lost all his teeth with a new set of teeth and a new head of hair.

hair, both of which he has today.